Several years ago, McHenry County Magazine began a tradition of honoring women who have offered their talents to the community.

They have created nonprofit organizations, commanded local advisory boards, participated in volunteer opportunities outside of their own workplaces and, most of all, continue to lead by example.

Each year, we solicit nominations from community leaders, local business professionals and our own readership. And, through this process, we discover that our communities are full of inspiring women.

This month, we continue the tradition with McHenry County Magazine's Women of Distinction class of 2018-19. We're introducing our honorees in this issue, paying tribute to them at an event May 10, and - in each month that follows - we will tell the complete story of every one of these outstanding local ladies.
